

Polymorph

Not to be confused with shape change.

Possible forms

The caster of a polymorph spell must have seen the creature they desire to turn the target into. For example, a magic-user cannot polymorph someone into a white dragon if the magic-user has never seen a white dragon.¹⁾

Body part restoration

Polymorphing can not restore lost limbs or other body parts. The polymorphed form will always have a proportionate amount of limbs/parts to the new form. For example, a 1-armed elf polymorphed into another elf will have 1 arm. That same 1-armed elf polymorphed into a spider will have 4 legs missing on one side.²⁾

Polymorphing the dead

Not allowed with polymorph other.³⁾

¹⁾

We find this reasonable on its own, but a book precedent can be found on DMG 45. We can extrapolate from those notes on phantasmal force: “The magic-user must know of and understand the force/creature he/she is making an illusion of. Thus, if the caster has never cast a fireball or has never seen a dragon turtle, his illusion of such will be very poor.”

²⁾

This ruling fits with the trope. It also prevents a 4th level spell from providing a higher level spell effect as a side effect. Yes, system shock is considered, but with high constitution, the risk is low.

³⁾

PHB 78. “Creature” can be assumed to mean “living creature” and not “corpse”. Furthermore, the spell description heavily suggests a living creature.
